Rupture by Clementine Morrigan

Clementine has created a masterpiece. At times heartbreaking, her stories of sexuality, incest, alcohol and domestic violence are all too familiar. In the hands of young women, this book has the possibility of bringing about stronger friendships, louder voices and real change. Her words pierce right to the bone and to the soul. She has spoken for those who thought they had no voice.

—LaMesha Melton, writer and editor of cocoa/puss zine

Clementine Morrigan is a multidisciplinary, queer feminist artist based in Toronto. She has been writing all her life and producing zines for the past ten years.
